To the PRINTER of the LONDON CHRONICLE.

SIR,

AN ex poſt facto queſtion, ſoon expected to be adviſedly diſcuſſed is, "Whether the Mother-country has a right of impoſing local taxes on all her American colonies?" The precedent fact is ſuppoſed to have been miniſterially preſolved, and influentially eſtabliſhed. This neceſſary previous queſtion, as to the right, remains ſtill to be put: And it is hoped the wiſdom and equity of both Houſes will not ſuffer it to be craftily ſlurred over, and much leſs precipitately carried;----as it were by a Coup de Main.

The proper arguments, ſtript of all political refinements and expediences, muſt turn on the conſideration of two principal points, viz. the conſtitutional power of the Britiſh parliament, reſpecting the aforementioned fact; and the actual exertions of royal prerogative, in the point of right; under which it is admitted that the colonies lay claim to, and avow their reſpective legiſlative privileges.

Engliſh liberty is a propriety attached to the individuals of the community, founded on the original frame or conſtitution of our government, and might be defined, "the primitive right that every freeholder had of conſenting to thoſe laws by which the community was to be obliged." Time and change of circumſtances extended this circle of comprehenſion, and made every ſubject in ſome reſpect or other a member of the legiſlature; his conſent at firſt perſonally denoted, was afterwards allowed to be given by proxy or repreſentative. Uſage and Conveniency transformed that indulgence into a right; and a general pretence in parliament being only judicially ſuppoſed, is thus rendered ſomething more than a legal fiction; hence the maxim prevailed,---"that every one was a party to all acts of parliament." This privilege of becoming a party to the laws, or of being in effect his own governor, was as it were the conſideration or price of individual ſubjection: And from the expreſs or implied exerciſe of it, the duty of our legal obedience is inferred. But an Engliſhman in America has no means of being preſent or repreſented in the Britiſh legiſlature, quaſi a Coloniſt: Where then is to be found his conſent to parliamentary acts operative there; and by what conſtruction can he be ſaid to give his voice? being thus in neither ſenſe a party, as wanting the fundamental privilege above-mentioned; and not having been ſubjected to any obligation of this kind by original patent or charter; but, on the contrary, an expreſs power being thereby granted to the colonies of enacting their own laws, provided the ſame be not repugnant to thoſe of Great-Britain. It is hard to conceive from what conſtitutional principle, applicable to a colony, not a conquered country, his obedience to our ſtatute-law can be deduced. I ſay, to ſtatute-law, or a mere Act of parliament, independently of any auxiliary juriſdiction derived from the blended exertion of prerogative in caſes of that legal repugnancy, which in terminis are excepted by their ſaid charters; and wherein prerogative ſingly, or conjunctively with both houſes, has and may acknowlegedly interpoſe, purſuantly to the ſame. This obedience would certainly be, with reſpect to him, a naked duty; an ex-parte obligation obtruded upon him, which is repugnant to the nature of all legal ties, and deſtructive of that principle wherein Engliſh liberty eſſentially conſiſts. But further, were the Engliſh Americans not only to be bound there by the acts of the Britiſh parliament in all caſes, but alſo by thoſe of their own aſſemblies:--------Here would be a ſubjection within a ſubjection, which might ſubordinate their actions to alternate contrarieties and croſs penalties! a duplicity of juriſdiction over the ſame objects, and equally, in the firſt inſtance, unknown to the law! a ſuperfetation in the legiſlative ſyſtem, which ſeems monſtrous and unnatural! The delegation therefore of a legiſlative power to the colonies, muſt, one would think, from its neceſſary efficacy, be conſidered not only as unconcurrent with, but as excluſive of all parliamentary participation in the proper ſubjects of their legiſlation; that is to ſay, in caſes not repugnant to the laws of Great-Britain. And in all ſuch caſes may not the maxim be fitly applied; Deſignatio unius eſt excluſio alterius, et expreſſum facit ceſſare tacitum?

That ſuch a queſtion ſhould be occaſioned at this time of day, ſeems altogether ſurprizing; after our very parliaments having taken occaſional notices of, and impliedly confirmed the acts of the American Aſſemblies in local levies and aſſeſſments: And the adminiſtration itſelf having had frequent recourſes to them for ſupplies in ſuch preſſing ſeaſons, when, if the Mother-country had a right of impoſing taxes, the importance of the occaſion would have worthily becomed her to have done ſo, and, on the ſuppoſition of that right, ſhould have done it, for the ſake of certainty and diſpatch.

But it has been aſſerted with more juſtice and conſiſtency, that the king's ſceptre is the inſtrument of power over the colonies, and prerogative the rule by which their obedience muſt be regulated. In this caſe, however, have not royal charters been granted, eſtabliſhing a conſtitution, and delegating to them the before mentioned qualified power of legiſlation? To which the crown, even for the neceſſary proviſion and maintenance of their government, has frequently referred itſelf, as to an eſſential principal concurring party; thereby recognizing that veſted right in the colonies, the eſtabliſhment whereof itſelf had originally preſcribed and chartered. Moreover, is not the king a perpetual conſtant branch of their legiſlatures; repreſentedly preſent in every aſſembly, and an actual party to all their Laws? And this being the caſe, prerogative muſt indeed be owned to have herein tempered its operations agreeably to the ſpirit of the Engliſh conſtitution, and to have thus generouſly bound and limited itſelf. Nor could it well have happened otherwiſe: For if, as has been ſaid, the common-law followed the ſubject to America, it is preſumed that prerogative could have only acted there conſiſtently with, and in conformity to it. Further, with particular reſpect to the point in queſtion, numerous are the inſtances of money-levies and aſſeſſments enacted by the American aſſemblies, that have travelled through occaſional examinations of the ſeveral boards and cognizances here, and nevertheleſs been confirmed, or received the royal approbation: And no inſtance that I can find has occurred, where any ſuch act has been diſallowed merely on account of its particular tendency, or of thoſe legiſlatures having exerciſed a power which did not appertain to them. And the royal confirmation of the actual exerciſe of this power proceeded, no doubt, from a due reſpect to, and conſideration of the ſtatute, De tallagio non concedendo; or, "The prohibition of impoſing any taxes or aids without the univerſal conſent of the freemen," &c. An exemption, founded on common law, and antient Engliſh Liberty! which it ſeems the coloniſts do conceive themſelves intitled to, as their birthright; that birthright, by which they are themſelves tied in intereſt to the Mother-country, and bound to a correlative loyalty, which thus requires not any military force to be ſecured or vindicated. So that whether this queſtion, of a ſubſiſting right to impoſe œconomical taxes on the colonies, be applied to the Britiſh parliament, independently as before noticed; or to the royal prerogative, excluſive of the American aſſemblies; IN BOTH CASES it would ſeem, as matters are circumſtanced, to be a loſt point. On the other hand, ſhould this right, ſo delegated to the colonies, be now conſidered by any after-thought as a reverſible error: be it remembered, that it was at firſt ſo delegated by ſolemn acts of government, that it proved the means of their paſt increaſe and cultivation, and by conſequence of thoſe immenſe profits and advantages which have thence accrued to us; that it is ſanctified by ſucceſſive uſage, grounded upon a generous reliance on Engliſh Faith and Compact, and that uſage, ratified by repeated authoritative acquieſcence; And laſtly, that any violation of their conſtitutions, by what means ſoever executed, might unhinge the principles of their natural and civil attachment to the Mother-country; thereby opening to our foreign enemies a direct paſſage into our palladium itſelf.

Nor, this privilege being left them, let it be thought that the colonies will of courſe be independent. No! numerous are the reſiduary ties which the Crown and Parliament have upon them:---the Navigation Act, by which they are directly excluded from all foreign markets;---the power of laying duties on their exports---tranſmitted to Britain;---the right of Port-entry and clearance;---the command of their caſtles, fortifications, and militia;---the appointment of their ſeveral officers, civil as well as military;--the executive power of government;---the right of convening, proroguing, and diſſolving their aſſemblies;---the Governor's negative to any bill;---the determination of appeals from the Courts of Judicature;---and, as a clincher, the abſolute juriſdiction of anulling their acts, when their beforementioned legiſlative power appears to have been exceeded. This is a general ſketch of the nature of that ſupremacy, which, with ſome partial exceptions, the Mother-country has retained over her colonies.----By it, it will appear HOW LITTLE has been left them; and, were that little to be now taken away, how ſoon, at the beſt, they might probably be deſerted. To conclude; were it not for this privilege, the condition of our Americans would be WORSE than that of any other Engliſh ſubject: A condition, that would argue the moſt intemperate folly and perverſeneſs to reduce them to! A folly and perverſeneſs, which muſt not be imputed to the policy of the Engliſh Nation!

I am, Sir, yours, &c. &c.

London, Nov. 27. ÆQUUS.

To the Printer of the SOUTH-CAROLINA GAZETTE, AND COUNTRY JOURNAL.

SIR,

IT is the indubitable Birth-Right of an Engliſhman to give his Sentiments on any public Matter with Freedom; and, in the Exerciſe of this Right, the Laws preſcribe no other Limits, than what are dictated by Decency and Good Manners; which, I hope, I ſhall never tranſgreſs. The Liberty of the Preſs, on Occaſions of this Nature, is evidently of the utmoſt Importance to the Liberty of the Subject: Indeed, they are ſo nicely interwoven, that, like Phidias's Picture in Minerva's Shield, the Extirpation of the one can never be effected without the Deſtruction of the other. It is clear then that the uninterrupted Enjoyment of this Right is a principal Ingredient in the Happineſs of a People, who glory in being the joyful Subjects of King GEORGE the Third; A Right derived from the Genius of that Liberty which diſtinguiſhes them from the greater Part of Mankind, who labour under the moſt inſupportable Tyranny and Oppreſſion, not far removed from a State of the moſt abject Slavery. I remember a late celebrated Writer introduces an Engliſhman and a Frenchman in Converſation together, when the latter extolling the fine Writings of his Countrymen, the former with a Mixture of Pity and Indignation replied, that there were only two Subjects worthy the Attention of a wiſe Man, to wit, Religion and Government, on neither of which a Frenchman dared to employ his Pen.

The Neceſſity of Subordination in human Affairs is ſo obvious, that it has been univerſally adopted, wherever Knowledge and Civility have exalted themſelves on the Ruins of Ignorance and Barbariſm; and as its Utility is admitted with Regard to Government in general, ſo it is in each particular Department whether civil, military or eccleſiaſtical.

I have been led to theſe Reflections on conſidering our preſent alarming Situation, reſpecting the Court of Common Pleas, which it ſeems is only nominally opened, and not eſſentially ſo; ariſing, as I am informed, from the Refuſal of the Clerk to obey the Orders of the Court.

In former Days the Kings of England preſided in the Courts of Juſtice, but as, in Proceſs of Time, the arduous Affairs of Government wholly ingroſſed the royal Attention, Juſtice has for ſome Centuries been adminiſtered through the inſtrumentality of Judges, who by the great Charter of our Liberties, are to be Men knowing in the Laws, and diſpoſed duly to obſerve them, (happy for us if this were always the Caſe.) Thus ſelected, they are appointed by our moſt gracious Sovereign, to ſit in Judgment on the Lives, Liberties and Properties of the Subject. The Clerk of the Court is a miniſterial and ſubordinate Officer, whoſe Duty it is to record the Acts of the Court, and to obey its Rules and Commands, or in other Words; he is the Servant of the Court.

I apprehend Obedience is included in the very Idea of Subordination, and the Admiſſion of the contrary, would be introductive of the utmoſt Anarchy and Confuſion. Is it not then a criminal Inverſion of all Order, for a miniſterial and inferior Officer to arrogate to himſelf a Power of controuling the Judges, and a virtual Denial of the Authority of the Crown, which by the Engliſh Conſtitution, is the Fountain of Honour and Offices? And if the King was actually preſent in Court, as in Law he is ſtill ſuppoſed to be, would not the Behaviour of the Clerk have been the moſt inſufferable Contempt to Majeſty? And is the Indignity diminiſhed by being offered to Perſons on whom he has delegated his Power? I believe every diſintereſted Perſon, who on the firſt of April, heard the worthy Magiſtrate deliver the Judgment of the Court, was abundantly ſatisfied with the Rectitude of the Deciſion: And as for the Clerk and his Adherents, however fond they may be of magnifying the Power of the Britiſh Legiſlature, by undermining American Freedom, it is the indiſputable Right of the Judges to conſtrue Laws. Indeed Inſtances might be produced of Judges who have had Virtue and Integrity enough to declare ſome Acts of Parliament abſolutely void: For it is not to be imagined that even Parliaments are infallible; ſeeing Hiſtory has ſtigmatiſed ſome with the diſreſpectable Appellations of Parliamentum inſanum, Parliamentum diabolicum, &c.

Now if the Court had been of Opinion that the Act, which has involved us in ſo much Diſtreſs, was void; the Clerk very probably would have ſtill oppoſed his Sentiments to the Judges: For it is a clear Propoſition, if he has a Right to aſſume a judicial Power in one Inſtance, he may do ſo in every Caſe, ſo that when the Opinion of the Judges correſponds with that of the Clerk, Judgment may be entered, but if they ſhould unfortunately happen to differ, he interpoſes his controling Authority, and the Adminiſtration of Juſtice is obſtructed by the Clerk's Prohibition. I have always underſtood that the Judgments of the inferior Courts are to have their full Influence and Effect, until they are reverſed in the Superior. It is therefore natural to enquire by what Right the Clerk of the Common Pleas exerciſes an Authority which clearly belongs to the new erected Court of Appeals, or to the Court of Chancery. But even admitting ſuch a Power could equally exiſt in this dignified Perſonage, yet the Public ſurely might expect he would have exhibited his Commiſſion, and taken the uſual Oath before he ſat in Judgment on the Rights and Properties of the King's Subjects. And is it poſſible we ſhould be reduced to ſuch a deplorable Situation, as to have our all, ſuſpended on the Caprice, or party Views, of an aſſuming Clerk of a Court?

The Contempt of the Clerk is of ſo unprecedented a Nature, that it were to be wiſhed he had been ſeverely fined, and committed 'till the Fine was paid. If this Step was not taken, I preſume, it is to be attributed to the Lenity of the Court, accompanied with an Apprehenſion that Redreſs would undoubtedly have been obtained from another Quarter, and not to the winning Deportment, the inimitable Graces and Virtues which the preſent Clerk poſſeſſes, beyond any of his Predeceſſors in Office. But however this may be, certain it is, that the Expectations of all Ranks of People have been moſt ſtrangely fruſtrated, in a Caſe where every Principle of Law and Reaſon combined to inſure Succeſs.

The Conduct of the Clerk of the Court merits the ſevereſt Reprehenſion; in Regard his Situation was more ſafe than that of any other Officer of the Court, and he could not have had a better Sanction to induce his Obedience than the Order of the Judges, which would have indemnified him in every Event. The Attorneys indeed might have their Scruples, for as they are not obliged, even by this oppreſſive Act, to carry on Buſineſs in the Way of their Profeſſion, unleſs they promiſe ſo to do, or take a Fee for that Purpoſe, their voluntary Acquieſcence might poſſibly render them obnoxious to its Penalties. To what Cauſe then are we to aſcribe the Diſobedience of the Clerk, but a Deſire of ingratiating himſelf with the Enemies of our Peace, and to manifeſt the Zeal with which he and his Adherents would rivet the Chains forged by the Tools of Corruption on the Necks of a free and loyal People.

LONDON, December 26.

A NARRATIVE tranſmitted from Ireland, by order of his excellency the lord-lieutenant, confirms the accounts given in our papers, of the late horrid murder committed by George Gidley and Richard St. Quentin, both Engliſhmen; Peter M'Kinſie, an Iriſhman; and Andres Zekerman, a Dutchman; late mariners on board the brigantine Earl of Sandwich, belonging to London, whereof John Cockerun was maſter, with the following additional particulars, viz. The ſhip ſailed from London about the month of June or July, 1765, laden with bale-goods, hardware, hats, &c. for Santa Cruz, in North-America, at which Place they arrived, diſcharged their cargo, and thence failed to Oratava, the Cape of Teneriffe, and there took in a cargo of Malcira wine, raw and manufactured silk, cochineal, and a large quantity of Spaniſh milled dollars, valued at 4s. 9d. each, ſome ingots of gold, ſome jewels, and a ſmall quantity of gold duſt; and about the month of November failed from Oratava for London, and had then on board the ſaid John Cockeran, captain; Charles Pinchent, mate; Peter M'Kinlie, boatſwain; George Gidley, Cook; Richard St. Quentin, Andrea Zekerman, and James Pinchent, brother to the mate, mariners, and Benjamin Galliſpey, the cabin-boy; and there they took on board, as paſſengers, one captain Glaſs, his wife and daughter, with a ſervant boy belonging to them. That before the ſhip left the Canaries, the ſaid Gidley, St. Quentin, Zekerman, and M'Kinlie, entered into a conſpiracy to murder the captain, and all the other perſons on board, and to poſſeſs themſelves of the Treaſure in the Ship; which on their paſſage they intended three different nights to accompliſh, but, by ſome accident or other, were prevented; till at length, on Saturday the 30th day of November, at eleven at night, the four Aſſaſſins being ſtationed on the night watch, and the captain having come on the quarter deck to ſee every thing properly ſettled, and returning to his cabin, the ſaid Peter M'Kinlie, ſeized him, and held him faſt, till George Gidley knocked him down with an iron bar, repeated the blows till he was killed, and then threw him overboard. The noiſe occaſioned by this murder, and the captain's groans, having alarmed Charles and James Pinchent, and captain Glaſs, they aroſe from their beds, and immediately came on deck; and the Pinchents being foremoſt, they were attacked by thoſe Villains, knocked down, and thrown overboard. They then murdered capt. Glaſs, threw his lady and daughter overboard, and ſteered for Ireland. On the third of December they arrived within ten leagues of the harbour of Waterford and Roſs; when they hoiſted out the cock-boat, loaded her with bags of dollars, to the quantity of about two tons, then knocking out her ballaſt port, got into the boat, and left the two boys in the ſinking veſſel to periſh. They landed in the county of Wexford; and having left out as much as they could carry, they hurried on the ſtrand on the lands of Broomhill, 250 bags of dollars, and proceeded up the river of Roſs with the remainder of the dollars, the ingots of gold, jewels, and gold duſt, and landed at Fiſhertown, within four miles of Roſs, where, while refreſhing themſelves at an alehouſe at Bally-Braſſel, a bag with 1200 dollars was ſtolen from them. St. Quentin, Zekernan, and M'Kinlie, were apprehended in Dublin, and Gidley on the road to Corke. They confeſſed the murder and all the particulars of the robbery, gave directions where to find the 250 bags of dollars, which they had buried, and they were found accordingly.

Jan. 1. Friday laſt a Footman, belonging to Major Matthews, ſhot himſelf at his Maſter's houſe, in Dean-Street, and not at Lord Bute's houſe, as mentioned. The following Remark concerning the Deceaſed is ſomething ſingular: He entered on his Service on a Friday, was born on a Friday, was married on a Friday, his eldeſt and youngeſt Sons were born on a Friday, ſhot himſelf on a Friday, and the Undertaker's Name is Friday, who has the burying of him, and it is ſaid, he will be buried next Friday in Friday-ſtreet.

The following remarkable Quotation from that eminent Foreigner Monſieur Roſſeau, was introduced in a Speech delivered by a Reverend Divine upon the Re-election of Mr. Pelham, for the County of Suſſex; and as the Obſervation, if juſt, is of the utmoſt Importance to the People of this Kingdom, we ſhall make no Apology for inſerting it.------

"The Engliſh imagine they are a free People, but they are "miſtaken; they are only free during the ſhort Time of "chooſing their Repreſentatives in Parliament, and as ſoon "as that Choice is determined, they almoſt always become "Slaves again; and they generally make ſo exceeding bad "a Uſe of the few tranſitory Moments that are given them "of Liberty, that they very richly deſerve to loſe it, and "become Slaves."

There is now living at a Place called Thorcombe, in Devonſhire, one Mrs. Mary Allen, Relict of Robert Allen, Carpenter, who is at this preſent Time in the 118th Year of her Age: She enjoys all her Senſes in Perfection, walks to Church every Sunday with the Aſſiſtance of a Stick, which is about 200 Yards Diſtance from her own Habitation, can make a Shirt or Shift, and read a Chapter in the Bible without Spectacles.

LONDON, February 10.

The report of a change in the miniſtry was well founded; as one of the leaders publickly declared, That the Favourite, or ſome of his friends, having oppoſed his meaſures, he would immediately apply to know the truth, and if they were countenanced in ſuch a procedure, he was determined to aſk permiſſion to reſign.

A report is current, that the terms propoſed by the court of Madrid concerning the Manilla ranſom, are ſtill ſhort of what might in juſtice and reaſon have been expected, and that procraſtination on the part of that court is ſtill to be complained of.

It was this morning reported, that the Right Hon. Lord Lyttleton is intended to ſucceed to the Chancellorſhip of the Exchequer.

Her Royal Highneſs the Hereditary Princeſs of Brunſwick, was ſafely delivered of a Prince, at her apartments in St. James's, this morning at one o'clock.

It is ſaid, that the importation of cotton, indico and rice, from our American colonies, will ſhortly be permitted for a limited time duty free.

We hear that the decreaſe of the duty on American goods imported from our colonies, and the duties paid on the exportation of European merchandize to thoſe parts, is computed at upwards of 120,000 l.

Orders are given to the Board of Ordnance to get ready a train of artillery, and alſo a quantity of military ſtores, to be ſent to Senegal.

It was this morning ſtrongly reported, that two ſeparate ſquadrons will ſoon be appointed to ſail for North-America.

Orders are ſaid to have been this week tranſmitted to ſeveral naval commanders in America and the Weſt-Indies, to hold themſelves in readineſs to ſail from their reſpective ſtations on the ſhorteſt notice.

Private letters from Amſterdam mention, that very large commiſſions had juſt been received, to ſhip European goods by the firſt opportunity, to the Dutch iſlands of Curacoa and St. Euſtatia, where a very lucrative commerce had for ſome months paſt been carried on with the Britiſh North-American Colonies.

The petitions from different colonies in America, are now under conſideration.

Private letters from Paris mention, that Count d'Eſtaing, late Governor of St. Domingo, had amaſſed the ſum of two millions and an half of livres, while Commander in Chief of the French Iſlands.

The French Iſlands were greatly diſtreſſed for proviſions when the laſt letters were received from Barbados; few North American victuallers having arrived for ſome time paſt.

Yeſterday Mr. de Mello, the Portugueſe Envoy, had a conference with his Majeſty's Secretaries of State, on the ſubject of the laſt diſpatches received from his court.

Letters from Peterſburg, of the 14th paſt, aſſert, that the froſt and deep ſnow, which had continued there for ſome weeks, had driven the wolves out of the woods, for want of food, into the highways and villages, where they had killed a great many people, and where ſeveral travellers had alſo been taken up, who were frozen to death.

It is ſaid that an extraordinary Board of Trade and Plantations will be held this week, to conſider upon ſome recent mercantile advices received from our Colonies in America.

In the courſe of the laſt year the following ſhips arrived in the Bay of Cadiz, viz. 89 Spaniſh, of which 31 ſhips of war; 334 Engliſh, 13 of which were ſhips of war; 131 French, 31 of which were ſhips of war; 144 Dutch, of which were 10 men of war; 36 Swedes, 52 Danes, 4 Neopolitan, 15 Reguſan, 7 Venetian, 4 Malteſe, 2 Genoeſe, and 1 Portugueſe: In all, 827.

A great number of Spitalfields weavers have ſhipped themſelves for America; their melancholy circumſtances obliging them to ſeek that bread abroad, which they cannot get at home.

Laſt Saturday cards were ſent to ſeveral Perſons of diſtinction, congratulating them on the preſent proſpect of mild meaſures being expected to be purſued with reſpect to America.

Laſt Saturday night diſpatches were ſent off from the Secretary of State's office, for Sir Henry Moore, Governor of New-York.

It is ſaid two ſeparate fleets are this ſummer to be ſtationed at Newfoundland, one at the eaſt and another at the weſt end of the iſland, the latter to prevent the French from any communication with the Labrador Indians, or other natives on the continent.

It is ſaid, our commanders will have orders to ſearch all French ſhips on their arrival on the coaſts, and to make legal ſeizures of all goods which cannot be comprehended in the articles of proviſions, fiſhing materials and ſtores.

It is very remarkable, the only ſhip that has arrived in any port of Great-Britain from America, with ſtamp'd bills of lading, is a Scotch one, which entered the Clyde the firſt inſtant.----The Clyde riſes in Annandale, and running N. W. through Clydeſdale, paſſes by Lanerk, Hamilton, and Glaſgow, falling into the Frith of Clyde, over againſt the Iſle of BUTE.

Extract of a Letter from a Lieutenant of Artillery in the Eaſt-India Company's ſervice, to a gentleman of Edinburgh, dated Feb. 7, 1765.

"We are ſtill proſecuting the war againſt Soujah Dowla, who is almoſt fairly expelled his own country. At preſent the army is employ'd in endeavouring to take Chanda Geer fort, near which I write this letter. It ſtands upon a very high hill, or rather rock, and on the very banks of the river Ganges, which makes it of the greateſt conſequence. You may have a notion of its ſituation from Edinburgh caſtle, as it much reſembles it, being vaſtly ſteep all around, with high rocks to clime, before one gets to the wall. I hope a few days more will make us maſters of it, which will be a great ſtep towards reducing the whole country. This place is about 150 miles higher up the river, than Patna, which is above 1000 miles from the ſea. Part of the army is beſieging Eliabad, Soujah's capital, about 66 miles higher up the Ganges; a large city, with a ſtrong fort, defended with high and thick walls. Battering cannon is all at preſent wanted to make it ſurrender, which are already ſet out for it. The country here is extremely fertile, and has a very fine proſpect, but the preſent ſituation of its inhabitants renders every thing very ſcarce.----Liquors and other neceſſaries muſt all come from Calcutta, and are ſold at extravagant prices."

We are informed, that ſome eminent gentlemen, proprietors of iron mines in America, have lately had an audience of his Majeſty's principal ſecretaries of ſtate; and alſo attended the boards of trade and treaſury, relative to obtaining a proper encouragement for importing pig and bar iron to Great-Britain and Ireland; by which a national ſaving of many thouſand pounds are propoſed to be made, hitherto conſtantly remitted to Ruſſia, Norway, Denmark and Sweden.

It is ſaid that the Marquis de Croy, Grandee of Spain, and Governor of Mexico, will ſettle, before his departure from England, an amicable intercourſe with our miniſtry, to be mutually carried on between the commercial part of the two nations in America.

We hear that a Britiſh conſul will ſoon be appointed to reſide in the iſland of Corſica, in conſequence of the late treaty concluded by the Hon. Hans Stanley, Eſq; with the Genoeſe.

AUGUSTA, in GEORGIA, March 27.

On Monday the 17th Inſtant, being the Anniverſary of St. Patrick the tutelar Saint of Ireland, Mr. MACARTAN gave an elegant Entertainment to the Gentlemen and Ladies of this Place, when the Iriſh Flag, on which were the Words LIBERTY, LOYALTY, and NO STAMPS, was diſplayed from the Top of his Houſe; at Noon his Fort fired 21 Guns, and the Evening concluded with a Ball.

WILMINGTON, (in North-Carolina) April 16.

It is rumoured in theſe Parts, that Advice has been received from England, that the Count of Great-Britain had declared War againſt the Portugueſe. Should this be the Caſe, France and Spain will doubtleſs immediately take Portugal under their Protection, and give the Engliſh ſomething to do, beſides ſtamping Paper, &c. for the American Colonies.

The Commiſſion appointing Dr. Houſton Stamp-maſter of this Province, (mentioned ſome Weeks ago) was Yeſterday opened; Mr. Houſton having come to Town in order to receive the ſame. With the Commiſſion came a Book of Inſtructions.----The Sons of Liberty being aſſembled in the Town-Hall, had the Commiſſion and Inſtructions read; after which they recommended it to the Doctor to lodge it in the Hands of ſome Gentleman of Credit, which he agreed to: And for as much as ſome then preſent had not been Witneſſes to the Oath he had formerly taken, a large Quarto Bible was handed to him, and he then ſwore--- "That he never would make any Attempt to enforce the Stamp-Act, till ſuch Time as it ſhould be agreeable to the People of the Province."

CHARLES-TOWN, APRIL 29.

ON Wedneſday laſt, the Snow Penn, Captain Harkiet, arrived here from St. Chriſtophers, in whom came Paſſenger, the Honourable Charles Lord Hope; who, we are informed, intends to make a Tour through this Continent, for the Recovery of his Health.

Extract of a Letter from Bermuda, dated March 16, 1766.

"I cannot help mentioning to you a moſt melancholy Affair that happened lately on board a Sloop, commanded by one Captain John Skot, or Scott. He ſailed from Antigua in November laſt, with 24 Guinea Slaves, three of which were Men, was 14 Weeks at Sea, and for 24 Days before their Arrival here, which was the 14th February, were quite out of Proviſions, and in all that Time ſupported themſelves chiefly with Lime Juice beat up with Butter, Pepper, Rum, and Water. Three Days before the Veſſel got here, one of the little Negroes died, which they were conſtrained to cut up and eat; there happened to be an Engliſh Wench on board, who told the three Men Slaves, that the White People had eaten the Piccanany, and that they would ſerve them in the like Manner; this it is thought enraged the Fellows, for they came on the Quarter Deck, and gave the Captain two dangerous Wounds on the Head, he made his Eſcape up the Shrouds for a ſmall Time; they then killed the Merchant, Mr. John Williams, Inſpector at Newbern in North-Carolina, where the Veſſel was bound, they threw the Mate overboard, and gave ſome of the Men dangerous Blows, who ran down into the Hold; they then purſued the Captain, cut off his right Thumb, and almoſt his right Foot, with Contuſions from his Head to his Feet, he however got down the Foreſtay, and on upon the Bolſprit, he then begged for his Life, gave them the Key of his Cheſt, the Buttons out of his Sleeves, and at laſt told them, that if they would go upon Deck, he would come off the Bolſprit, accordingly they went under the Quarter Deck, and by this Means the Captain got an Opportunity to ſteal into the Hold, and there lay undiſcovered about twenty-four Hours, in which Time the Veſſel drove along the South Side of our Iſland, when ſome of the Inhabitants went on board, brought the Captain and People on ſhore, and carried the Veſſel into a ſafe Harbour. I think that in all my Practice I never ſaw a more diſmal Spectacle than the Captain was, I diſpaired of his Recovery when I firſt ſaw him, and for Ten Days after, but bleſſed be God, he is now recovering, and I hope will ſoon be well."

Extract of a Letter from Savannah, in Georgia, dated March 29, 1766.

"Laſt Night the pretended Sons of Liberty in this Place made an Attempt to regain their loſt Honour. Our Stamp-maſter having come in from the Country the Night before, was allowed to remain unmoleſted till the Evening of Friday the 28th, when he was attacked by (as one of your Correſpondents has named them) ſome of theſe mighty Men of Valour, who demanded of him, if he intended to diſtribute any more of his Stamps, he very plainly told them, he would not perjure himſelf, and would give them to any who would apply for them. With this he was permitted to depart, till a Number of (as they ſtile themſelves) Sons of Liberty ſhould be aſſembled together, by the Sound of a French Horn, at a Tavern in Town. Now mark the Penetration of theſe Heroes, about Four Hours were taken up in deliberating about their weighty and important Affairs, after which they furiouſly ſallied forth in Search of this deteſted Monſter, whom they hunted for from Place to Place, but to no Effect, for by that Time he had a ſufficient Warning of their Deſign. Their laſt Propoſal was to board the Speedwell lying in the River, whether they thought he might have fled for Refuge; but the grand Debate was how to get on board, on this they ſplit, and contented themſelves with hailing her from the Shore, after which they departed to Sleep, which they had better have done all this while than acted the Part they have done. Some of the Ringleaders were of thoſe who lately entered into Bond, not to uſe Stamps but for the Shipping.---------- Sufficient Matter of Ridicule this to all the real Sons of Liberty."

OSBORNE STRATON, WRITING-MASTER and ACCOMPTANT from London, after giving his Friends the ſtrongeſt Aſſurances, of the grateful Senſe he muſt ever retain of their Favours, begs Leave to acquaint the Public, that, in Order to render the Education of the Youth, that now are, or hereafter may be intruſted to his Care, the more compleatly effectual, he has admitted as a Partner in his Endeavours, THOMAS NICOLSON, Profeſſor of the Latin and French Languages; and with his Aſſiſtance, propoſes on Thurſday the firſt of May next, to begin a regular Courſe of accademical Education, in his old School, at the Corner of Simmons's Alley, in Union-ſtreet; where young Gentlemen and Ladies may be inſtructed in the modern Syſtem of uſeful and practical Literature, upon ſuch plain, familiar and eaſy Principles, as can ſeldom fail, in a moderate Time, with due Application on their Parts, to qualify them for Buſineſs, or prepare them to proſecute their more refined or exalted Studies at any Univerſity. Mr. Straton has long and feelingly lamented the Want of ſo evidently neceſſary and important a Connection; and has with adequate Pleaſure embraced this firſt Opportunity of enabling himſelf to carry on his extenſive Plan of Education, in all its Branches, under the ſame Roof; the Convenience whereof to the Students, cannot fail of being obvious: We therefore humbly hope for ſuitable Encouragement from the Candour and Generoſity of the Public, to whom our beſt joint Endeavours ſhall ever be conſtantly and faithfully devoted; and to do the ſtricteſt Juſtice in our Power. No more than a very moderate Number can poſſibly be admitted.
